Council Chamber Oet. 4th, 1915.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening.

In the absence of Mayor Gibbard, the chair was occupied by Reeve Denison.

Present - Councillors Walters, Wiseman, Waller, Osborne, Dickinson and Graham.

The minutes of the last session were read and confirmed.

A deputation, composed of Mr. M. S. Madole. Mrs. Fred L. Hooper and Mrs. E. Wilson, waited upon the council in the intere-ts of the Children's cil in the interests of the Children Add Society, of Lennox and Addington. Mr. Madole addressed the council, setting forth the good work accomplished by this Society in the looking after and helping of the neglected and dependent children of the county. He also very ably set forth the urgent need of financial assistance from the different municipalities of the county if this benevopalities of the county if this benevolent work was to be energetically and systematically carried on. At present systematically carried on. At present the Society was very much in need of between $300 and $400. The other municipal councils throughout the county would be visited and it was hoped that each would contribute a proportionate amount, and the financial needs would quickly be realized. After Mr. Madole had concluded his Messrs. E. L. Bedore and W. H. Dumbar appeared before the council relative to the question of proper drainage for their property. They were anxious to have the sewer of Alma avenue put in as soon as possible, in order that they might properly drain their residential property.

They were given to understand that owing to financial stringency, the council did not purpose putting in any more sewers this year,

A communication was read from the officials of the Canadian Northern Railway, relating to the location of their new station. The gist of the letter was, that it is the council that expressed itself as in favor of the new station being located near the Belleville road. They would abide by the decision of the council providing the council would open and construct a roadway from Centre street west to the new station location, and lay down a suitable walk. The railway officials themselves would prefer that the new station be located north of Centre street, between the C.N.R. and G.T.R.

HARRY HUNTER KILLED IN AUTO-MOBILE ACCIDENT.

An auto accident occurred Thursday afternoon on the road between Napa-nee and Strathcona, in which Harry Hunter, the seventeen year old son of Mr. John Hunter, of Tamworth, lost his life. Young Hunter and Mr. A. J. Cordingly, a traveller, were going from Napanee to Tamworth in Mr. Hunter's runabout and in going down the hill near the old Madden farm the auto skidded over an embankment turning completely over in the ditch. Mr. Cordingly was thrown clear of the car and escaped with a shaking up, but Hunter was caught under the car and the steering wheel landed on his chest, crushing the life and the incomplete the life and the steering wheel landed on his chest crushing the life out of him. Coroner Cowan was notified and visited the scene of the accident, and an inquest will be opened this (Friday) morning.

They Carried Out a Demonstration to Draw Enemy Out.

OTTAWA, Oct. 5.—Major-General Sir Sam Hughes has received the following cable from Sir Max Aitken, general representative of the Minister of Militia in France:

"Canadian headquarters in France, October 3.—During the latter half of the period, September 20-30, a combined British and French offensive has been steadily developing. Fierce fighting has 'aken place at various points along the allied line in weather alternating brilliant sunshine and torrential rains.

"Progress has been made on our front. Hostile fire has been somewhat heavier than usual, and the enemy's artillery has been more aggressive, but with little net results. The enemy's aeroplanes and snipers have been particularly active.

"On the morning of Saturday, September 25, a demonstration was carried out by our divisions. The German trenches were heavily manned, and our artillery machine guns and rifle fire are believed to have caused numerous casualties. The enemy's official communique stated that an attack had been made by us and had been repulsed with heavy loss. This, of course, is false.

"Reports indicate considerable movement of troops in the rear of the enemy's lines opposite our front. Our working parties have repaired the slight damage to our wire and parapets caused by the enemy's shell fire, and have been continuously employed improving our lines. Our patrols continue to be very active at night

OFFENSIVE SLACKENING.

Germans on Eastern Front Suffer for Lack of Reserves.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 5.—A general slackening of German activity has been noticed along the entire front. Since the failure of their successfully begun operation against Sventziany the German left wing has lost all its activity. The right wing, after a series of unsuccessful engagements, has been unable up to now to recover or after conditions. Consequently the centre, having lost the service of both wings, is brought to a deadlock by the determine! Russian resistance.

Military experts explain the German failure as chiefly due to the absence of reserves. To relieve the cavalry before Sventziany, the Germans have been compelled to shift forces from the right flanks of the armies of Gens. von Eichhorn, von Scholtz, and von Gallwitz over 250 to 350 miles of damaged roads.

The Russian position at Dvinsk is unshaken.

VEIL OVER BULGARIA

Mystery Surrounds Her Answer to Ultimatum of Allies

No Word is Available Regarding Action of Balkan State, but Movements of Troops Indicate Approach of Hostilities—Russian Warships Are Off Varna, and British and French Troops Have Landed at Saloniki.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—The time alloted Bulgaria by the Allies through Russia to turn her back on Germany, Austria, and Turkey, expired this afternoon, but the expiration of the time limit brought no immediate surface indications to clarify the situation.

Whether the Russian Minister promptly left the Bulgarian capital, as his Government threatened, provided Bulgaria declined to meet the Russian ultimatum; whether Bulgaria dissembled, asking for further time; or whether King Ferdinand and his supporters merely observed silence, was not known in London last night.

Events have been transpiring, however, in keeping with the fast approaching crisis involving the entry of the Balkans in the European conflict. Russian warships have appeared in the Black Sea off the Bulgarian port of Varna; French and British troops have landed at Saloniki, a Greek port fifty miles south of the Bulgarian frontier, and Bulgarian troops, which have been on the move for days, have been massed in great numbers along the Serbian border.

From the news received during the past few days from the Balkans it is considered certain that King Ferdinand and Premier Radoslavoff have made their choice, and are only awaiting the completion of mobilization to strike at Serbia and assist the Austro-Germans to open the road to Constantinople, which has been anxiously waiting for many weeks for promised aid from the central powers.

Greece, it is believed, will live up to her treaty with Serbia and come to her assistance if she is attacked by her neighbor, but the attitude of Roumania, which remains as only partially mobilized spectator, is a matter of uncertainty.

A Bucharest despatch says that it is unofficially announced there that Germany and Austria-Hungary have united in sending an ultimatum to the Roumanian Government demanding immediate transit for troops and ammunition through Roumania to

SORCERERS IN PAPUA.

Easy to Start In the Business There and Terrify the Natives.

It is no very hard matter to set up as a sorcerer in Papua. One says, "I am a sorcerer," and the thing is accomplished. One may be a greater sorcerer or a lesser sorcerer, to be sure, but one is a sorcerer of some degree of evil merit at least from the hour that one says, "I am a sorcerer." Thereafter the measure of success a practitioner may win depends upon his skill in advertising and the ingenuity of his magical methods. What is new and mysterious is everywhere mightily impressive, and in Papua, as elsewhere, what a man noisily reiterates about himself comes eventually to be accepted as at least an approach to the truth concerning him.

A certain Tai-imi, for example, having settled in a village of the Girariver, said, "I am a sorcerer," and he was forthwith a sorcerer. He said, "I have an invisible snake with which to work my will," and his fame began. They said, "Where is the snake?" And he replied: "Have I not said that the snake is invisible? How can I show you an invisible snake?" And his fame grew. And he added, "Beware of me, if you please, for I am very easily offended, and my invisible snakes obey me."

Finding now that he was inspiring terror indeed, Tai-imi created an establishment to forward his consequence. Three menials were taken in to wait upon his wants at home, and two qualified assistants were engaged to attend his dignity abroad. To the qualified assistants, in enhancement of his own importance. Tai-imi gave invisible snakes. BURK'S FALLS, Oct. 5 .- A murder has, it is alleged, been commit-ted near Whitehall, in the district of Parry Sound. A young Italian, James de George, a lumber jobber by occupation, disappeared about September 14. He had been working for Richard Cassan, a small farmer living near Whitehall, who, with his wife, is now under arrest.

District Constable Stewart had his suspicions aroused by certain statements alleged to have been made by Cassan and his wife. Yesterday Constables Stewart and Johnson returned to Whitehall with a search party, and at 3 p.m. found the body of the murdered man in an old well about forty rods from Cassan's house. body had been thrown in headfirst. There was a bullet wound, apparently entering the back between the shoulders and passing out through the chest, and a large gash in the head. Cassan and his wife were arrested and brought to Burk's Falls lock-up. Dr. H. L. Barber, Coroner, Burk's Falls, left last night for the scene of the murder to hold a post-mortem.

Germany Fails to Satisfy the Demands of the United States.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5 .- Germany has failed to satisfy the request of the United States that the sinking of the Arabic with a loss of American lives be disavowed and liability for the act assumed by the Imperial Government. This became known after a conference last night between President Wilson and Secretary of State Lansing, at which the latter submitted a note given him yesterday in New York by Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador.

No announcement was made after the White House conference. Secretary Lansing said merely that it was inadvisable to comment on the situation while the negotiations were still confidential.

While the situation has improved to the extent that there is no danger of an immediate break in diplomatic relations, as the note affords an op-portunity for further negotiation, it was stated reliably that final refusal by Germany to meet the American viewpoint on the Arabic case might bring about the threatened rupture.

Greece, it is believed, will live up to her treaty with Serbia and come to her assistance if she is attacked by her neighbor, but the attitude of Roumania, which remains as only partially mobilized spectator, is a matter of uncertainty.

A Bucharest despatch says that it is unofficially announced there that Germany and Austria-Hungary have united in sending an ultimatum to the Roumanian Government demanding immediate transit for troops and ammunition through Roumania to Bulgaria and Turkey, where the forces at the Dardanelles are seriously in need of supplies of all kinds. Great significance is attached to the reported ultimatum. This action is held to be the grounds for an Austro-German declaration of war against Roumania, for it is as certain as anything connected with the Balkan situation can be that Roumania will refuse the demand for transit of German troops. Such a refusal will be the grounds for a declaration of war.

On the other hand, there seems little doubt that Germany and Austria are only waiting for the completion of Bulgarian mobilization to begin an invasion of Serbia. Knowing well that Roumania will refuse the demands made upon her, the Teutonic powers are apparently planning to strike south across the Danube into Serbia, while the Bulgarian forces, acting in concert, strike north. passageway will afford the Germans opportunity to send supplies to Turkey, the end towards which they have been striving for the last six months. "We delivered a counter-attack last night and achieved our objective, which was two German trenches south-west of Fosse, which the enemy had recovered in his counter-attack of the 26th. There have been no other events on our front."

NORTH HOLLAND IN WINTER.

Skating Is Business There, and the Skaters Wear No Shoes.

In the north of Holland, writes Temple Manning in the Indianapolis Star, I saw the serious side of skating. the side that is not an idle art, but a practical business.

The very first thing the tiny Frisian learns after be acquires the ability to toldle around is how to skate. If he wasn't an expert he would be seriously handicapped all the rest of his life, for the country is a network of waterways. and when they freeze over all business is done on their slippery bosoms. To the Frisian it is second nature to skate. To him it is a delight as well as a necessity, and he is more at home on skates than he is on a good earth road.

If you ask a Frisian which season he likes best, summer or winter, he will answer "winter." In summer he finds it harder to pole or pull his boat through the waters of the canals than in winter to push a sledge along while be follows on his skates. To him the canal is his road.

The first oddity that struck me when I came into this land of skating delights was that the skaters did not wear shoes. They strapped their skates to their feet over very heavy socks that kept out the cold. They laughed at me when I went skating with my skates clamped to leather boots. They could not understand how on earth I could skate freely and gracefully. As a matter of fact I am far from being a graceful skater, but the Frisians were too polite to laugh at my clumsiness, attributing it entirely to my shoes.

Of course I went to Friesland with preconceived notions of what the country would look like, but the charm of the reality was far beyond my imagination. It seemed to be a land of ice and snow that was not unhappily cold -rather the frigid element seemed to be a completing touch of perfection. I have never seen Friesland in summer, but I cannot imagine it separated from its frozen waterways and its picturesque skaters.

Were I to epitomize Friesland in a single description I would picture it as a sheet of ice flowing between two banks that glitter with snow, and in the center I would place a milkman pushing a sledge filled with cans before him, as he skated whistling merrily behind. 'And behind him I would draw a bevy of boys and girls skylarking on skates.

SYNOPSIS.

Sanford Quest, master criminologist of the world, finds that in bringing to justice Macdougal, the murderer of Lord Ashleigh's daughter, he has but just begun a life-and-death struggle with a mysterious master criminal. In a hidden hut in Professor Ashleigh's garden he has seen an anthropoid ape skeleton and a living inhuman creature, half monkey, half man, destroyed by fire. In his room have appeared from nowhere black boxes, one containing diamonds torn from a lovely throat by a pair of armless, threatening hands, both with sarcastic, threatening notes signed by the incrutable hands. On his return from finding the body of Macdougal, who had escaped on his way to prison, he is arrested for the murder of his valet, Ross Brown, and a Miss Quigg, in his rooms. Laura and Lenora, his assistants, suspect Craig the professor's valet, trap Craig and rescue Quest from the Tombs to hypnotize Craig into confession, but when Quest arrives he finds that Craig and Lenora have both disappeared. Craig and Lenora have both disappeared. He dodges Police Inspector French, who has discovered his escape.

SIXTH INSTALLMENT

THE UNSEEN TERROR.

CHAPTER XIV.

With a little gesture of despair Quest turned away from the instrument which seemed suddenly to have become so terribly unresponsive, and looked across the vista of square roofs and tangled masses of telephone wires to where the lights of larger New York flared up against the sky. From his attic chamber the roar of the city a few blocks away was always in his ears. He had forgotten in those hours of frenzied solitude to fear for his own safety. He thought only of Lenora. He paused once more before the little instrument.

"Lencra, where are you?" he signaled. "I have taken a lodging in the Servants' club. I am still in hiding, hoping that Craig may come here. I am very anxious about you."

Still no reply! Quest drew a chair up to the window and sat there with folded arms looking down into the street. Suddenly he sprang to his feet. The instrument quivered-there was a message at last! He took it down with a little choke of relief.

"I don't know where I am. I am terrified. I was outside the garage when I was seized from behind. The 'Hands' held me. I was unconscious until I found myself here. I am now in an attic room with no window except the skylight, which I cannot reach. I can see nothing-hear nothing. No one has hurt me, no one comes near me. Food is pushed through a door, which is locked again immediately. The house seems empty, yet I fancy that I am being watched all the time. I am terrified!

Quest drew the instrument towards him.

"I have your message," he signaled. "Be brave! I am watching for Graig. abouts. Keep up your courage, Lenora. You shall be free in an hour.'

The trapped man looked away from the instrument into Quest's face. There was a momentary flicker of something that might have passed for courage in his tone.

"Mr. Quest," he said, "you are a wonderful man, but there are limits to your power. You can tear my tongue out from my mouth, but you cannot force me to speak."

Quest leaned a little farther forward in his chair, his gaze became more concentrated.

"That is where you are wrong, Craig. That is where you make a mistake. In a very few minutes you will be telling me all the secrets of your heart."

Craig shivered, drew back a little in his chair, tried to rise and fell back again helpless.

"My God!" he cried. "Leave me alone!

"When you have told me the truth," Quest answered swiftly, "and you will tell me all I want to know in a few minutes. . . Your eyelids are getting a little heavy, Craig. Don't resist. Something which is like sleep is coming over you. You see my will has yours by the throat."

Craig shook his head. A very weak smile of triumph flickered for a moment at the corners of his lips.

"Your torture chamber trick won't work on me!" he exclaimed. can never-"

The whole gamut of emotions seemed already to have spent themselves in the man's face, but at that moment there was a new element, an element of terrified curiosity in the expression of his eyes as he stared towards the door.

"Is this another trick of yours?" he muttered.

Quest, too, turned his head and sprang instantly to his feet. From underneath the door came a little puff of smoke. There was a queer sense of heat of which both men were simultaneously conscious. Down in the street arose a chorus of warning shouts, increasing momentarily in in that tense moment he heard a little sob of relief from the people below.

Hand over hand he made his way to the nearest pole and slipped easily to the ground. The crowd immediately surged around him.
"Where is the man who came down before me?" he asked a bystander.

"Talking to the police in the car over yonder," was the hoarse reply. "Say, guv'nor, you only just made that!"

Craig pushed his way through the crowd to where Craig was speaking eagerly to French. He stopped short and stooped down. He was near enough to hear the former's words.

"Mr. French, you saw the man come down the ropes and swing on the cables? That was Quest, Sanford Quest, the man who escaped from the Tombs prison. He can't have got away yet."

Quest drew off his coat, turned it inside out and replaced it swiftly. He coolly picked up a hat someone had lost in the crowd and pulled it over his eyes. He passed within a few feet of where Craig and the inspector were talking.

"Say, boys, Sanford Quest is in the crowd somewhere. He's the man who jumped on the cable lines. A hundred dollars for his arrest!"

Quest turned reluctantly away. Men were rushing about in all directions for him.

CHAPTER XV.

The professor swung round in his chair and greeted Quest with some surprise, but also a little disappointment.

"No news of Craig?" he asked.

"I got Craig, all right," he replied. "He came to the Servants' club, where I was waiting for him. My luck's out, though. The place was burned to the ground last night. I saved his life and then the brute gave me away to the police. I had to make my escape as best I could."

The professor tapped the table peevishly.

"This is insufferable," he declared. "I have had no shaving water; my coffee was undrinkable: I can find nothing. I have a most important lecture to prepare and I cannot find any of the notes I made upon the subject."

Quest smoked in silence for a moment.

"Any mail for me, professor?" he asked abruptly.

The professor opened a drawer and handed him a telegram.
"Only this!"

Quest opened it and read it through. It was from the sheriff of a small town in Connecticut:

"The men you inquired for are both here. They have sold an automobile and seem to be spending the proceeds. Shall I arrest?"

Quest studied the message for a moment.

"Say, this is rather interesting, professor," he remarked. "These are the two thugs who set upon me at the section house. They killed the signal man, who could have been my alibi, and swiped my car, in which, as it cannot be found, French supposes that I returned to New York. With their arrest the case against me collapses. I tell you frankly, professor," Quest continued frowning. "I hate to leave the city without having found that girl; but I am not sure that the quickest way to set things

Quest drew the instrument towards him.

"I have your message," he signaled. "Be brave! I am watching for Graig. Through him I shall reach you before long. Send me a mesage every now and then."

Quest again took up his vigil in front of the window. Once more his eyes swept the narrow street with its constant stream of passers-by. Then suddenly he found himself gripping the window sill in a momentary thrill of rare excitement. His vigil was rewarded at last. The man for whom he was waiting was there! Quest watched him cross the street, glance furtively to the right and to the left, then enter the club. He turned back to the little wireless and his fingers worked as though inspired.

"I am on Craig's track," he signaled. "Be brave."

He waited for no reply, but opened the door and, stealing softly out of the room, suddenly confronted Craig in the deserted hallway. Before he could utter a cry Quest's left hand was over his mouth and the cold muzzle of an automatic pistol was pressed to his

"I know nothing about her."

"She locked you in the garage," Quest continued, "and sent for me. When I arrived I found the garage door open, Lenora gone and you a fugitive."

Bewilderment struggled for a moment with blank terror in Craig's expression.

"How do you know that she locked me in the garage?"

Quest smiled, stretched out his right arm and his long fingers played softly with the pocket wireless.

"In just the same way," he explained, "that I am sending her this message at the present moment-a message which she will receive and understand wherever she is hidden. Would you like to know what I am telling her?"

The man shivered. His eyes, as though fascinated, watched the little instrument.

"I am saying this, Craig," Quest continued. "Craig is here and in my power. He is sitting within a few feet of me and will not leave this room until he has told me your where-volume. Quest threw open the door and closed it again at once.

"The place is on fire," he announced "Pull yourself together, man. We shall have all we can do to get out of this."

Craig turned to the door, but staggered back almost immediately.

"The stairs are going!" he shrieked. "It is the kitchen that is on fire. We are cut off! We cannot get down!"

Quest was on his hands and knees, fumbling under his trucklebed. He pulled out a crude form of fire escape, a rough sort of cradle with a rope attached.

"Know how to use this?" he asked Craig quickly. "Here, catch hold. Put your arms inside this strap."

Yard by yard, swinging a little in the air, Craig made his descent. When he arrived in the street there were a hundred willing hands to release him. Quest drew up the rope quickly, warned by a roar of anxious voices Then he commenced to descend, letting himself down hand over hand, always with one eye upon that length of rope that swung below. Suddenly, as he reached the second floor a little cry from the crowd warned him of what had happened. Tongues of flame curling out from the blazing building had caught the rope, which was being burned through not a dozen feet away from him. He descended a little farther and paused in mid-

A shout from the crowd reached

"The cables! Try the cables!" He glanced round. Seven or eight feet away, and almost level with him, was a double row of telegraph wires. Almost as he saw them the rope below him burned through and fell to the ground. He swung a little towards the side of the house, pushed himself vigorously away from it with his feet, and at the farthest point of the outward swing jumped. His hands grappled the telegraph wires safely. Even "Say, this is rather interesting, pro-fessor," he remarked. "These are the two thugs who set upon me at the section house. They killed the signal man, who could have been my alibi, and swiped my car, in which, as it cannot be found, French supposes that I returned to New York. With their arrest the case against me collapses. I tell you frankly, professor," Quest continued frowning. "I hate to leave the city without having found that girl; but I am not sure that the quickest way to set things right would not be to go down, arrest these men and bring them back here, clear myself, and then go tooth and nail for Craig."

"I agree with you most heartily," the professor declared. "I recommend any course which will insure the return of my man Craig!"

"I cannot promise you that you will ever have Craig here again," Quest observed grimly. "I rather fancy Sing Sing will be his next home."

Quest stepped off the cars at Bethel a little before noon that morning. The sheriff met him at the depot and greeted him cordially but with obvious surprise.

"Say, Mr. Quest," he exclaimed, as they turned away, "I know these men are wanted on your charge, but I thought-you'll excuse me for saying so-that you were in some trouble yourself."

Quest nodded.

"I'm out of that-came out yesterday. The moment my car is identified and Red Gallagher and his mate arrested every scrap of evidence against me goes."

"Well, here's the garage and the man who bought the car," the sheriff remarked, "and there's the car itself in the road. It's for you to say whether it can be identified."

Quest drew a sigh of relief. "That's mine, right enough," he declared. "Now for the men."

"Say, I want to tell you somethe sheriff began dubiously. thing." "These two are real thugs. They ain't going to take it lying down."

"Where are they?" Quest de manded.

"In the worst saloon here," the sheriff replied. "They've been there pretty well all night, drinking, and they're there again this morning, hard at it. They've got firearms, and though I ain't exactly a nervous man, Mr. Quest-'

"You leave it to me," Quest interrupted. "This is my job and I want to take the men myself."

"You'll never do it," the sheriff declared.

"Look here," Quest explained, I let you and your men go in, there will be a free fight, and as likely as not you will kill one, if not both of the men. I want them alive."

"Well, it's your show," the sheriff admitted, stopping before a disreputable looking building. "This is the saloon."

"Well," Quest decided, "I'm going in, and I'm going in unarmed. You can bring your men in later, if I call for help or if you hear any shooting."

"You're asking for trouble," the sheriff warned him.

"I've got to do this my own way." Quest insisted. "Stand by now."

He pushed open the door of the saloon. There were a dozen men drinking around the bar and in the center of them Red Gallagher and his directed the sheriff, who with his n had at last succeeded in forcing way into the saloon.

of you for a time, young lady, and I'll ask you a few questions later on. My men are searching the house. You and I will be getting on, if you can tear yourself away." * * *

The plain-clothes man, who was lounging in Quest's most comfortable easy chair and smoking one of his best cigars, suddenly laid down his paper. He moved to the window. A large, empty automobile stood in the street outside, from which the occupants had presumably just descend-He hastened towards the door, which was opened, however, before he was halfway across the room. The cigar slipped from his fingers. It was Sanford Quest, who stood there, followed by the sheriff of Bethel, two country policemen and Red Gallagher and his mate, heavily handcuffed.

"Say, aren't you wanted down yonder, Mr. Quest?" the man inquired.

"That's all right now." Quest told him. "I'm ringing up Inspector French myself. You'd better stand by the other fellows there and keep your eye on Red Gallagher and his mate."

"I guess Mr. Quest is all right," the sheriff intervened. "We're ringing up headquarters ourselves, anyway."

The plain-clothes man did as he was told. Quest took up the receiver from his telephone instrument and arranged the phototelesme.

He took a magnifying glass from his pocket and examined very closely the whole of the front of the safe.

"No sign of finger prints," he muttered. "The person who opened it probably wore gloves."

He fitted the combination and swung open the door. He stood there for a moment speechless. Something in his attitude attracted the inspector's attention

"What is it, Mr. Quest?" he asked eagerly.

Quest drew a little breath. Exactly facing him, in the spot where the jewels had been, was a small black box. He brought it to the table and removed the lid. Inside was a sheet of paper, which he quickly unfolded. They all three read the few lines together:

"Pitted against the inherited cunning of the ages, you have no chance. I will take compassion upon you. Look in the right-hand drawer of your desk.

Underneath appeared the signature of the "Hands." Quest moved like one in a dream to his cabinet and pulled open the right-hand drawer. He turned around and faced the other two men. In his hand was Mrs. Rheinholdt's

STANDING TIMBER.

Rule by Which to Figure Out Its Contents In Board Feet.

The contents of trees in board feet is usually figured by Doyle's rule. This rule is to deduct four inches from the small diameter of the log for slab, squaring one quarter of the remainder and multiplying the results by the length of the log in feet. For example, to find the contents of a twelve foot log twenty-four inches in diameter (inside the bark) at the small end-24 inches minus 4 inches equal 20 inches; 20 inches by 1/4 equal 5 inches; 5 by 5 by 12 equal 300 board feet.

Perhaps an easier way to get at the same result is to state the rule as follows: From a sixteen foot log deduct four inches for slab and square the remainder. For longer or shorter logs the contents would be proportioned to the length. In the above case it would be worked out thus: 24 minus 4 equals 20, 20 by 20 equals 400, for a sixteen foot log. But a twelve foot log is twelve-sixteenths or three-quarters as long as a sixteen foot log; therefore this log contains three-quarters of 400 board feet, or 300 board feet. If the log were twenty feet long it would contain one and one-quarter times 400 feet, or 500 feet.

A common way of estimating standunected the sherin, who with his men had at last succeeded in forcing his way into the saloon.

. Crouching in her chair, her pale, terror-stricken face supported between her hands, Lenora, her eyes filled with hopeless misery, gazed at the dumb instrument upon the table. Her last gleam of hope seemed to be passing. Her little friend was silent. Once more her weary fingers spelled out a final, despairing message.

"What has happened to you? I am waiting to hear all the time. Has Craig told you where I am? I am afraid!'

There was still no reply. Her head sank a little lower on her folded arms. Even the luxury of tears seemed denied her. Fear, the fear which dwelt with her day and night, had her in its grip. Suddenly she leaped, screaming, from her place. Splinters of glass fell all around her. Her first wild thought was of release; she gazed upwards at the broken pane. Then very faintly from the street be low she heard the shout of a boy's angry voice:

"You've done it now, Jimmy! You're a fine pitcher, ain't you? Lost it, that's what you've gone and done!'

The thoughts formed themselves mechanically in her mind. Her eyes sought the ball which had come crashing into the room. There was life once more in her pulses. She found a scrap of paper and a pencil in her With trembling fingers she wrote a few words:

"Police headquarters. I am Sanford Quest's assistant, abducted and imprisoned here in the room where the ball has fallen. Help! I am going mad!"

twisted the paper, looked around the room vainly for string, and finally tore a thin piece of ribbon from her bosom. She tied the mesthrew it at the empty skylight. The first time she was not successful and the ball came back. The second time it passed through the center of the opening. She heard it strike the sound portion of the glass outside, heard it rumble down the roof. A few seconds of breathless silence! Her heart almost stopped beating. Had it rested in some ledge or fallen into the street below? Then she heard the boy's voice:

"Gee! Here's the ball come back again!"

A new light shone into the room. She seemed to be breathing a different atmosphere—the atmosphere of hope. She listened no longer with horror for a creaking upon the stairs. She walked backwards and forwards until she was exhausted. . Curiously enough, when the end came she was asleep, crouched upon the bed and dreaming wildly. She sprang up to find Inspector French, with a policeman behind him, standing upon the threshold.

"Inspector!" she cried, rushing towards him. "Mr. French! Oh. thank God!

Her feelings carried her away. She threw herself at his feet. She was laughing and crying and talking incoherently, all at the same time. The inspector assisted her to a chair.

"Say, what's all this mean?" he demanded.

She told him her story, incoherenty, in broken phrases. French listened with puzzled frown.

Then he realized that she was on the point of a nervous breakdown

"You've found Lenora, then, inspector?" he exclaimed. "Bully for . What do I mean? What vou! I say! You forget that I am a scientific man, French. "I'll just repeat my story of that morning, Mr. French," Quest said. "We went out to find Macdougal, and suceeded, as you know. Just as I was starting for home those two thugs set upon me. You know how I made my escape. They went off in my automobile and sold it in Bethel. I arsage round the ball, set her teeth and rested them there myself this morning. HOW PINS ARE MADE.

An Intricate Process Where Machinery Does All the Work.

To make a pin is an intricate process, but it is all done by machinery. A spool of brass wire running on steel posts is fed into jaws which bite off the length of the pin. A small length is left to make the head, which is formed by three rapid blows of a hammer which moves forward one twentieth of an inch at each blow. The pin then drops to an incline in which are grooves deep enough to admit the shank, but not the head.

As the pin moves down its point comes in contact with a cylinder with a file like surface, which causes the pin to turn round so that it is sharp ened on all sides. It next drops into a receptacle where a layer of pins is placed, and then a layer of finely ground tin until the pan is filled. Heat and a chemical solution coat the pins with tip.

They are then polished in a barrel revolving rapidly. They are placed in the papers by a machine, which seizes the paper and crimps it into divisions as wide as the length of the pins. The bottom of the box is made of square steel bars, which allow the shanks but not the heads of the pins to pass through.

The bars are in motion, thus shaking down the pins until a row is formed. when they are clamped in place by the bars. A fold of paper is pushed up against them and pressed into place This is repeated until the paper is full. when another takes its place. It all sounds intricate, but being done by machinery it is rapid and cheap, else we could not have the billions of pins that we waste.-Indianapolis News.

A certain estimable old gentleman is at all times worth listening to, though occasionally his grammar is scarcely perfect. He was dining on one occasion with the local squire, when, much to the disgust of his worthy host, a trifling error on the old gentleman's part was pounced upon and loudly repeated by the son and heir of the house. There was a painful silence, broken at length by the host.

"My son," he remarked quietly to the young fellow, "there are times, I admit, when our old friend's speech is a little peculiar. At such times you might be of mutual assistance to each other."

"In what way, sir?" asked the son.

A duett, "Just As I Am," was given by Mrs. W. G. Fretts and Mrs. T. M.

Asselstine, of Hawley. After the collection was taken the convention revolved itself into a family

Gareful attention was given Mrs. Hartman, Odessa, in her paper. "Should the Mothers le Anxious to Interest their Children in Missions"? The missionary standards of the Bible and the Methodist church, and the Methodist church, "Every woman in the church a member of the Missionary Society," are the same. Missions are the central teachings in the Bible. One million teachers, to re-inforce our Christian schools, will soon be needed, and our children must fill the places. Childhood is the impressionable age so the missionary spirit should be taught early in life Mrs. D. W. Roblin, of Adolphus town, gave an interesting paper "Will the Children be better workers than their M Auxiliary workers than their Mothers"? A perfect foundation is needed for perfect building, so children, trained when their hearts are easily touched, will certainly make the better work-

In the absence of Mrs. Tucker, of Deseronte, her paper was read by Mrs. Cragg, of Napanee. "What is a Mother's Responsibility toward her Daughter"? was a paper each mother must take home to herself. Mother's ideals greatly effect the daughter's life. The home is the foundation on which the church must build for development. Missionary seed sown by the mothers will surely bear fruit for generations to come.

A bright paper, "What is a Mother's responsibility towards her daughter' responsibility towards her daughter; was given by Miss Annie Wilson, of Switzerville Circle, in which she compared the Auxiliary to a mother, and the Circle to a daughter, and just as a daughter looks to her mother for love, sympathy and encouragement, example and remembrance in prayer, so does the Circle expect these things from the Auxiliary.

Morven Cradle Roll favored the audience with a patriotic chorus,

Special interest was evinced in a paper ["Christian Stewardship" by Mrs. F. W. White of Wilton. Steward has occupancy, responsibility and accountability, and although we may deny Christ, we are all His may deny Christ, we are all His stewards and will not be free from responsibility and accountability. The present is a money accumulating age, and the supreme need of to-day is a Christianizing of the money power of the world. The Question Drawer, answered by

Mrs. Madole, proved a helpful feature. Mrs. Detfor moved a vote of thanks to the ladies of Morven for their hospitality, which was carried by a standing vote.

Rev. Mr. Allan, of Morven Circuit, in a few words, followed by the benediction, brought a most successful convention to a close. Proceeds for day, $46.00

Hitherto the commemoration of Trafalgar Day has been chiefly confined to patriotic organizations, and esto patriotic organizations, pecially among those in which women are prominent, such as the Victoria and Empire Leagues of London, England, and the Trafalgar Daughters. of the Empire in Canada.

However, this year the whole Empire is asked to join in the observance of this day, and Lord Lansdowne has urged that the Commoration take a practical form, in contributions to Red ('ross Work.

The above committee consider this observance particularly appropriate this year, when our Navy has been doing such great and silent work. though we know it to be so effectual however, we do not hear very much about it, still we have good reason to know that our Navy is our Premier service for protection.

Consequently, the Ladies' of the 185 Telephone Line, Morven, will very kindly serve afternoon tea for the Daughters of the Empire and Commit-Thursday tee, at their rooms on Thursday afternoon, 21st October, Trafagar Day, when a hospital supply shower will be held for the Navy. Further particulars will be given next week.

All members of the Daughters of Dear Sir,-In your issue of Septem ber 3rd. 1915, you gave considerable prominence to the fact that I was arrested the week previous in Monee by Provincial Inspector H. Napaburn on a charge of "counselling others to commit a crime.

In justice to myself I wish to state my trial came off here on Wednesday, Sept. 29th, before His Lordship, Mr. Justice Middleton, the trail being by jury. Four witnesses werd sworn for the Crown, viz., A. Adrick, Mrs. A. Adrick, M. Adrick and L. Nser. These witnesses contradicted A. Adrick, M. GREAT FOUNTAIN GEYSER.

One of the Many Wonders In the Yellowstone National Park.

The Great Fountain geyser, in the Yellowstone National park, lies a mile and a half southeast of the Fountain geyser. It is the chief wonder of the lower basin and in some respects the most remarkable geyser in the park. Its formation is quite unlike that of any other.

At first sight the visitor is tempted to believe that some one has here placed a vast pedestal upon which to erect a monument. It is a broad, circular table about two feet high composed of hard, siliceous deposit. In its surface are numerous pools, molded and ornamented in a manner quite unapproachable, at least on so large a scale, in any other part of the park. In the center of the pedestal, where the monument ought to stand, is a large irregular pool of great depth, full of hot water, forming to all appearances a lovely, quiescent spring.

At times of eruption the contents of this spring are hurled bodily upward to a height sometimes reaching 100 feet. The torrent of water which follows the prodigous downpouring upon the face of the pedestal flows away in all directions over the white geyserite plain. No visitor to the Yellowstone can afford to miss the Great Fountain geyser. - "The Yellowstone National Park," by Hiram Martin Chittenden, Brigadier General United States Army, ....., that is an ord story. The or not water, forming to all appearto explain is that the patronage list is a considerable curse which does its best to hold our soldiers back by keeping them short of uniforms, shells, machine guns, and other war gear.

If instead of stating that there were twice as many soldiers as were wanted, the Major General had stated that there were twice as many soldiers as the Tory clothing factories could make suits for, he would have been nearer the mark. If the Major General and colleagues can help it, no Canasoldier goes into battle with Grit khaki on his stalwart form. It might influence his vote in the general election which is to be pulled off at the fighting front when Kaiser permits. The Canadian patronage list does its share toward delaying the big drive. If Sir Sam explained it fully he could show how the patronage list operates to curtail the output of ammunition perhaps fifty per cent. by turning down the plants whose owners are Liberal. Their shells may be alright but their political opinions are all wrong. Liberals, with large plants at their disposal, find it does not pay to appear before any of the Government departments or purchasing commissions, who always insist that their hair is not of the right color. They also find that it doesn't get them very far forward to write through Sir Sam or Premier Borden to the British War Office. They either get no answer or a refusal, but if they take a trip across the ocean and see the big fellows in the Horse Guards per-sonally they land the war orders all right. Once they get outside the three mile limit and away from the local influence of the patronage list they have tolerable luck.

Naturally the Major General wouldn't tell the reporters that the patronage list was responsible for the short-age in uniforms—that wouldn't have been playing the game-but that was what he had in mind. He knows, well as the next man, that the Militia Department, the Purchasing Commission, the Shell Committee, buy no thing without first consulting the patronage list, which is a secred docu-ment delivered under supernatural circumstances to Sir John Macdobald about the time of the C.P.R. scandal and handed down by him to his successors who have kept it edited up to date. It is the Bradstreet, Baedeker and Bible of the great Conservative party, and a Grit has about as fat a chance of getting into it as a twomasted camel has of navigating the eye of a needle. This breaking of dreds of miles in length and the movement of the broken parts over one another set up jars or vibrations which traveling outward in all directions through the rocks constitute an earth quake.

The severity of the shock depends upon the character and extent of the break, the amount of movement and the distance of the point from the place of origin of the disturbance.

Earthquakes also occur frequently in connection with volcanic eruptions, but these are likely to be more local in character and, on the whole, less severe than those due to faulting .- Review of Reviews.

KENNETH M. SHOREY WRITES FROM EGYPT.

Abassaih, Cairo. Egypt Aug. 24th, 1915, fied

Dear Mother and Father :-

Well it is as hot as ever to-day, there was also a very hot wind off the desert. I was orderly sergeant to-day, we cleaned out some wards, to-day, we cleaned out some wards, and got beds etc. into them, all ready for the patients which we expect will land in on us to-morrow. It is one of the rules of letter writing that we cannot tell from what company the wounded come or where from, so you will understand if I never say anything about that, our letters are all to be handed in censored by one of our chaplains who will stamp them. We were paid today for the first since leaving England. We should be paid again a week from to-day, the most of the fellows were completely broke.

We had an inspection by the head of the forces in Egypt this afternoon.

it did not amount to much.

I did nothing all day for I not orderly sergeant and there Was nothing else to do as the men were cleaning up some more rooms for beds, we are all ready now for about 160 patients but they have not ar-It is hot and fine as usual. rived.

To-day was a holiday in Egypt, as it was the celebration of the cutting of the "Khalig," the name of a dam across the Nile, years ago they used to dam the water back as the Nile rose as it does this time of year, then cut the dam and allow the water to rush over the land, they then threw a girl into the water and let her drown, then threw in gifts of

Of course the supply is now controlled at Assuan about nine hundred miles up the river, and there is no longer a "Kalig" to cut, but to cut, but there is a celebration just the same, and the Sultan gives gifts to the poor, they say there is a good Sultan now, who spends a great dea, of money in charity.

No patients yet, we expect them tomorrow, 26th. I was very tired last night for I was orderly sergeant sergeant again, and there was a good deal of running around to do, seeing about the cleaning up of various rooms and getting the beds into new wards, we have 320 beds set up and over forty patients.

They are almost convalescent, but require surgical or X-ray treatment they all seem to think they have struck a fine place.

I have not yet been put on a ward with patients in it, but the beds in my ward are already for patients when they do come.

is a ho, low tomb which contains the body. There are a good many mos ques in the place the roofs of which have fallen in.

There are some old tombs half a mile out of the city which they say is the burial place of some of the old Kings of Egypt and and and are very ancient, but we satis-fied ourselves by looking at them from a distance as it was very and we would have had no road walk on in going to them, just the sand.

We reached the citadel at last, pretty hot and tired, when we went through the mosque of Mohammed Ali., and the mosque of the citadel or the Alabaster mosque, whichever you the Alabaster mosque, whichever you on big slippers over our boots and the guide took us in, it is an exact copy of the mosque of St. Sophia at Constantinople. First we went into a large courtyard all paved with marble, in the centre is a large foundaries in the centre is a large foundaries a which Mohammedians wash tain at which Mohammedians wash their hands and feet three times before going inside to pray, surrounding the yard is a wall, through the openings in which can be seen all Cairo with the Pyramids in the distance, it is very pretty.

We then went into the mosque, there are no central pillars, but some-thing like Trinity Church, Napanee, there is a central dome with four quarter domes surrounding it, they are beautifully colored. Hanging from the roof are a vast number of candleabra on chandeliers I think they are the chandeliers I think they are called, the dome is 150 ft. high and the chandeliers hang clear from the top, on the east side of the mosque is a small alter where they pray, on each side is a round pillar, the only in the place, they are there so that if any blind man comes in can feel around, and when he comes to a pillar he knows he is in the right place. The floor is covered with heavy rugs, the three of us tried to pull one across the floor but could not move it, the guide told us they were made in Constantinople. The reason it is called the Alabaster mosque is because all the pillars along the riges are made of Alabaster, brought from up the Nile somewhere, I got a piece of the same kind as a souvenir. We were allowed to look through a window at the tomb of Mohammed Ali., the first khedive of Egypt.

Sept. 3rd. There are no patients yet in my ward, so my duties in that regard are not very heavy, beginning to-day we are having lectures once a

TO GIBRALTAR

BOSTON, Oct. 3-A flotilla of American-built submarines, which ventured across the Atlantic to join the British naval forces at Gibraltar, made the passage safely under its own power and without extraordinary discomfort for the crews, according to letters received here to-day from men who shared in the expedition.

Convoyed by larger warships, the little squadron of four vessels, fresh from the yards at which they were assembled in Montreal, proceeded down the St. Lawrence River and after a stop at St. John's, Newfoundland, put to sea for Gibraltar. No extremely rough weather was encountered and all the boats were able to make the long run under their own engines. Provision, had been made to tow them if they got into any trouble.

CONTRACTED FOR TEN.

The flotilla formed part of a group of ten submarines for which the British admiralty had contracted in the United States. After Washington had decreed that the construction of the vessels in this country would be a violation of neutrality, the parts were shipped to Canada, where the boats were completed in the yards of the Vickers-Maxim Co., an English cern, which two years ago established a branch in Montreal for the building of merchant ships.

By the middle of July the submarines were ready for the water, and naval officers who had arrived from England, conducted a series of trails in the St. Lawrence River.

CONVOYED BY CRUISER.

When it was established that the new vessels were seaworthy, they sailed from Montreal under convoy of the gunboat Canada. Off the Island of Anticosti, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, they were joined by the cruiser Calgarian. The latter, an Allan liner had been taken over by the British admiralty at the beginning of the war, and fitted out as an auxiliary cruiser with 4-inch guns.

FRENCH KEPT DOWN LOSSES BY RUSES

PARIS, Oct. 3-By their methods of preparation and attack the French kept their losses in Champagne down to a remarkably low figure. The French tactics and strategy in attack completely deceived the Germans' and thereby greatly increased the German losses. The French line swept forward with tremendous gusto to a point where they seemingly were brought to a halt by the German resistance. The French centre slowly gave ground. Meanwhile the wings held. As the centre fell back the Germans pressed forward their counter-attack, to cut the French line and turn defeat into victory. But as soon as the Germans were drawn well into the trap the French surged forward again all along the line and waded into Germans from three sides with bayonets. The Germans were caught in the mass and the slaughter went on till the men sickened of the work. The French went northward again then and literally cut their way thru

The thoroly outfitted Calgarian turned her prow eastward, suiting her pace to that of her proteges. The latter travelled on the surface thruout the voyage, propelled by crude oil engines. Each carried a crew of two officers and 16 men. Submerged, the boats are driven by electric motors, but in the voyage Ito Gibraltar electricity was used only for heating and cooking.

CANADIAN DIVISION IN HEAVY FIGHTING

OTTAWA, Oct. 3.-The second Canadian division is now beginning to take a part in the big drive. This is evident from the reports of casualties which have reached the militial department during the last couple of days. The casualties are not serious, but they are greater than has been the case while trench tighting only was in progress.

It is expected that the Princess Patricias will be attached shortly to the second Canadian division. So far they have been fighting with one of the British divisions.

Arthur Clark, a son of Dr. Michael Clark, M.P. for Red Deer, who enlisted in the Princess Patricias as a private, has been given a lieutenancy. He has been with the regiment continually.

Copyright, 1915, by George Barr McCutcheon.

I almost forgot to mention a trifling bit of news that came to me the day before sailing. Elsie Hazzard wrote in great perturbation and at almost unfeeling length to tell me that Count Tarnowsy had unearthed the supposedly mythical Rothhoefen treasure chests and was reputed to have found gold and precious jewels worth at least a million dollars. The accumulated products of a century's thievery! The hoard of all the robber barons! Tarnowsy's!

Strange to say, I did not writhe nor snarl with disappointment and rage. I took the news with a sang froid that almost killed poor Poopendyke. He never quite got over it.

Nor was I especially disturbed or irritated by the telegram of condolence I received on board ship from Tarnowsy himself. He could not resist the temptation to gloat. I shall not repeat the message, for the simple reason that I do not wish to dignify it by putting it into permanent form.

We were two days out when I succeeded in setting my mind at rest in respect to Aline, Countess Turnowsy. I had not thought of it before, but I remembered all of a sudden that I held decided scruples against marrying a divorced woman. Of course that simplified matters. When one has preconceived notions about such matters they afford excellent material to fall back upon, even though he may have disregarded them after a fashion while unselfishly thinking of some one else. As I say, the recollection of this well defined though somewhat remorseless principle of mine had the effect of putting my mind at rest in regard to the countess. Feeling as strongly as I did about marriage with divorcees, she became an absolutely undesirable person so far as matrimony was concerned. I experienced a rather doubtful feeling of relief. It was not so hard to say to myself that Lord Amberdale was welcome to her, but it was very, very difficult to refrain from adding the unamiable words "damn him."

This rigid, puritanical principle of mine, however, did not declare against the unrighteousness of falling in love with a divorcee.

once reminded that Britton is an excellent chap, whose opinions are always worth considering. So I started for the links, stopping first at the office of the hotel on my way out, ostensibly to complain about the absence of window screens, but in reality to glance over the register in quest of certain signatures,

A brisk, oldish little man came up beside me and rather testily inquired why there were no matches in his room; also why the hot water was cold so much longer than usual that morning. He was not much of a man to look at, but I could not fail to note the obsequious manner in which the two clerks behind the desk looked at him. You couldn't possibly have discovered anything in their manner to remind you of hotel clerks you may have come to know in your travels. A half dozen boxes of matches were passed out to him in the twinkling of an eye, and I shudder to think what might have happened if there had been a hot water faucet handy, they were so eager to please.

"Mr. Brewster gone out yet?" demanded this important guest, pocketing all of the matches. I could see at once that he was a very rich man. "Did he leave any message for me? He didn't? He crossed to the news counter and glanced over the papers while a dusky bellboy shot off in quest of Mr. Scott.

"They all hate to play with the old geezer," said one of the clerks-a young one, you may be sure-lowering his voice and his eyebrows at the same time. "He's the rottenest player in the world."

"Who is he?" I inquired, mildly in terested.

"Jasper Titus," was the reply. "The real old Jasper himself."

Before I could recover from my sur prise the object of my curiosity ap proached the desk, his watch in his hand.

"Well, what does he say?" he de manded.

"The-the boy isn't back yet, Mr Titus," said one of the clerks, involuntarily pounding the call bell in his nervousness.

KIDNEY DISEASE WAS KILLING HIM

Until He Used "Fruit-a-tives" The Great Kidney Remedy

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., Aug. 26th, 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My Kidneys were not doing their work and I was all run down in condition. Having seen 'Fruit-a-tives' advertised, I decided to try them. Their action was mild, and the result all that could be expected.

My Kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes and I regained my old-time vitality. Today, I am as well as ever." B. A. KELLY.

ly bad form, but with a purpose that let me to some degree into the secret of his success in life. If I do say it myself I am a fairly good player. I don't believe I was ever in better humor than on this gay November morn. I even apologized for Mr. Titus' execrable foozles. I amiably suggested that he was a little off his game and that he'd soon strike his gait and give me a sound beating after the turn. His smile was polite, but ironic, and it was not long before I realized that he knew his own game too well to be affected by cajolery. He just pegged away, always playing the odd or worse. uncomplaining, unresentful, as even tempered as the May wind, and never by any chance winning a bole from me. He was the rarest "duffer" it has ever been my good fortune to meet.

CHAPTER XXVII. She Proposes.

S a rule, the poorer the player the louder his execrations. Jas. per Titus was one of the worst players I've ever seen, but he was the personification of gentility even under the most provoking circumstances. For instance, at the famous "Crater" it was my good fortune to pitch a ball fairly on the green from the tee. His mashle shot landed his ball about twenty feet up the steep hill which guards the green. It rolled halfway back. Without a word of disgust or so much as a scowl he climbed up and blazed away at it again, not once. but fourteen times by actual count. On the seventeenth stroke be triumph antly laid his ball on the green. Most men would have lifted and conceded the hole to me. He played it out.

"A man never gets anywhere, Mr. Smart," said he, unrufled by his miserable exhibition, "unless he keeps plugging away at a thing. That's my principle in life. Keep at it. There is satisfaction in putting the blamed ball in the hole, even if it does require twenty strokes. You did it in three, but you'll soon forget the feat. I'm not likely to forget the troubles I had going down in twenty, and there lies the secret of success. If success comes easy we pass it off with a laugh; if it comes bard we grit our teeth and re-

I don't know just how it came about, but the suggestion was made that I put into narrative form the lively history of my sojourn on the banks of the Danube, trusting implicitly to the imagination yet leaving nothing to it.

"But it's all such blithering rot," said I.

"So much the better," said they triumphantly-even eagerly.

"I don't suppose that you, as publishers, can appreciate the fact that an author may have a soul above skittles," said I indignantly. "I cannot, I will not, write a line about myself, gentlemen Not that I consider the subject sacred, but"-

And so it came to pass that I took myself off that evening for Hot Springs, secure in the thought that Poopendyke would attend to my literary estate far more capably than I could do it myself and that my labors later on would be pleasantly devoted to the lazy task of editing, revising and deleting a tale already told.

If you are lucky enough to obtain rooms in the Homestead looking our over the golf course, with the wonderful November colorings in the hills and gaps beyond; over the casino, the ten nis courts and the lower levels of the fashionable playground, you may well say to yourself that all the world is bright and sweet and full of hope. From my windows I could see far down the historic valley in the direction of Warm Springs, a hazy blue

I tried to convince him that the pleasure had been all mine and then inquired for Mrs. Titus and the countess

"They're both here, but the good Lord only knows where. Mrs. Titus goes driving every morning. Roads are fine if you can stick to them Aline said something last night about riding over to Fassifern this forenoor with Amberdale and young Skelly.

Let's see, it's half past 10. Yes, they've gone by this time. Why didn't you write or telegraph Aline? She'll be as mad as a wet hen when she finds von've come without letting her know."

"I thought I should like to take her by surprise," I mumbled uncomfort-

"And my son Jasper-why, he will explode when he hears you're here. He's gone over to Covington to see a girl off on the train for Louisville. You've never seen such a boy. He is always going to Covington with some girl to see that she gets the right train home. But why are we wasting time here when we might be doing a few holes before lunch? I'll take you on. Of course, you understand I'm a wretched player, but I've got one virtue: I never talk about my game and I never tell funny stories while my opponent is addressing the ball. I'm an old duffer at the game, but I've got more sense than most duffers."

We sauntered down to the club house, where he insisted on buying me a dozen golf balls and engaging a caddy for me by the week. Up to the moment we stepped up to the first tee he talked incessantly of Aline and Rosemary, but the instant the game was on he settled into the grim reserve that characterizes the man who takes any enterprise seriously be it work or play.

I shall not discuss our game further than to say that he played in atrociousthe noie to me. He played it out.

"A man never gets anywhere, Mr. Smart," said he, unruffled by his miserable exhibition, "unless he keeps plugging away at a thing. That's my principle in life. Keep at it. I'm not likely to forget the troubles I had going down in twenty, and there lies the secret of success. If success comes easy we pass it off with a laugh; if it comes hard we grit our teeth and remember the ways and means. You may not believe it, but I took thirtythree strokes for that hole one day last week. Day before yesterday I did it ln four. Perhaps it wouldn't occur to you to think that it's a darned sight easier to do it in four than it is in thirty three. Get the idea?" "I think' I do, Mr. Titus," said I.

"The things that 'come easy' are never appreciated."

"Right, my boy. It's what we have to work for like nailers that we lie awake thinking about."

We came out upon the eminence overlooking the next hole, which lay far below us. As I stooped to tee up my ball a gleeful shout came up the hillside.

"Hello, John Bellamy!"

Glancing down, I saw Jasper junior at the edge of the wagon road. He was waving his cap, and even at that distance I could see the radiance in his good looking young face. A young and attractively dressed woman stood beside him. I waved my hand and strouted a greeting.

"I thought you said he'd gone to Covington to see her off," I said, turning to the young man's father, with a

"Not the same girl," said he succinctly, squinting his eyes. "That's the little Parsons girl from Richmond. He was to meet her at Covington. Jasper is a scientific butterfly. He makes both ends meet-nearly always. Now, no one but a genius could have fixed it up to see one girl off and meet another on the same train."

Later on Jasper junior and I strolled over to the casino veranda, the chatty Miss Parsons between us, but leaning a shade mearer to young Titus than to me, although she appeared to be somewhat overwhelmed at meeting a real live author. Mr. Titus, as was his habit, hurried on ahead of us. I afterward discovered he had a dread of oneumonia.

"Aline never said a word about your coming. John," said Jasper junior. He called me John with considerable gusto. "She's learning how to hold her tongue."

DROWNING OUT A FIRE.

High Pressure Water Streams That Tear Down Room Partitions.

Just think of picking up a pond or a small reservoir containing about 30 .-000 gallons of water and throwing it bodily at a fire, and then picking up another pond or reservoir containing the same amount of water and throwing that at the fire within a moment's time, and keeping up this performance every minute for an hour until the fire is drenched with nearly 2,000,000 gallons of water! Quite a "bucket brigade," eh?

Practically that is what the New York fire department does today with its high pressure system, for with this method of water supply the firemen can obtain 30,000 gallons of water a minute and, if necessary, at a maximum pressure of 300 pounds to the square inch - sufficient pressure or "pushing power" behind the stream to carry it from the street to the top of an eight story building or even higher. It has the greatest possible advantage over the "throwing" method, since the firemen, with the aid of their water towers and monitor nozzles, can direct right into the heart of the fire this immense volume of water-enormous streams that smash windows, tear down partitions, sweep aside merchandise and squirm, twist and force themselves into every nook and corner of a building, searching out the fire better than the firemen can and smothering it before it can reach the danger

And this is why that in a portion of New York city noted a few years ago for destructive fires the big fire has. in a sense, disappeared .- Charles T. Hill in St. Nicholas.

THE CORNCOB PIPE.

At Times It's Risky, and It Doesn't Go Well With a Silk Hat.

The corncob pipe is a democratic institution. One evidence of the fact that this country is not so democratic as foreigners believe is that, according to the code of an American gentleman. the corncob pipe must not be smoked while wearing a silk hat. On the other hand, it may be for this reason that Americans so seldom affect the silk hat.

But some men find difficulty in adapting themselves to the "Missouri meerschaum." They contend that the first puff from a new corncob pipe is like a breath from the nether regions. This aversion arises from the circumstance that, like a sponge, a new cob pipe should be dipped in water before it is used. After the first pipeful of tobacco has been smoked it will be found that a liberal coat of ashes has attached itself to the walls of the pipe. rendering it thereafter much less likely to burn the tongue than if it were initiated without the formality of baptism.

There is one place, however, where the cob pipe is distinctly dangerous, and that is in the mouth of a beginner in the mellow art of smoking. Mothers who dread the day when their sons shall feel obliged to assert their entrance into man's estate by acquiring a taste of tobacco will do well to buy a corncob pipe and leave it carelessly about the house. In time it will be missed. So will the boy's appetite. But the appetite will come back .- indianapolis News.

ons had none;
He rode all unarmed and he rode all alone.

"Silly, isn't it, to crack a man up as riding unarmed when he carried a broadsword that ranked with the weapons of those days about where a machine gun does now? We wouldn't boast of the nerve of a man these days who went to call on his ladylove with a gatling, would we?

"These poetry heroes do such very foolish things! There's also 'Horatius.' you know:

"So he spake, and, speaking, sheathed

His good sword by his side. And, with his harness on his back, Plunged headlong in the tide.

"Can you imagine it? A man with a couple of tons of iron attached to his person and very likely a spiked helmet diving head first into a river! Why, he'd have spiked himself to the bottom so hard that he'd be there yet. It's supremely ridiculous, and no one but a major poet would have dared even hint at such a thing. What Horatius really did, if he had the sense of a brass pup, was to jump in feet first so that he could begin churning himself to the surface the minute he struck the water.

"But it's when he monkeys with ships and railroad trains that the poet becomes most absurd:

" 'We are lost!' the captain shouted As he staggered down the stairs.

"Remember that old favorite, illustrating the power of faith? Read it to a seafaring man some day and hear or way with pricks-it be got his train through, which he probably wouldn't. The chances are the train would slip back and pile up in a ditch somewhere while the engine was resting.

"But for supreme idiocy commend me to 'Casabianca.' Why, say, if that boy had been left in a house and the house caught fire and the boy had refused to let the firemen rescue him because papa had told him not toago away you'd be sorry for him. of course; but you'd never think of cracking him up as anything but an example of unprecedented imbecility! You'd reason, Well, that kid didn't have sense enough to grow up anyway,' and let it go at that. Yet the poet goes to work and roasts him to death on a burning ship just because papa isn't there and expects you to applaud the inhuman net. It makes me tired!

"And the rithing that some of these big guns do is simply atrocious. A little fellow couldn't get actoss with it in a thousand years. Here take 'Mandalay,' for example:

"On the road to Mandalay, Where the old flotilla lay,

With our sick beneath the awnings when we went to Mandalay.

"What kind of riming is that-lay, lay, lay? It's repetition, not riming at all. You couldn't get a license to do that "trind of thing, and neither could I; so it's plain enough that Kipling must have tilled out his own license and the public stood for it. It isn't fair; but it's done all the time-by the big peothe Dig into their work a bit and see if it isn't."

Well, I have, and I am sorry now that I listened to the casual caller. I can no longer read poetry with my former careless appreciation of it: I have become too critical .- Elliott Flower in Chicago Herald.

SECRET OF LIVING.

If we can only come back to nature together every year and consider the flowers and the birds and confess our faults and our mistakes under the silent stars and hear the river murmuring in absolution we shall die young even though we live long, and we shall have a treasure of memories which will be like the twin flower, a double blossom on a single stem, and carry with us into the unseen world something which will make it worth while to be immortal.-Henry van Dyke.

Mankind Coming Forth From the Tomb in Answer to Prayer,

Parable Applies to the Millennium-Co-operation With Christ in Raising the Dead-Two Classes Gradually Developed—Both Will Outwardly Keep God's Law-Selfishness the Controlling Principle With the Goat Class.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 19.— Pastor Russell spoke here today in the Academy of Music. His very instructive sermon was based on the text, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these My brethren, ye have done it unto Me." -Matthew 25:

40. The parable of the Sheep and the Goats refers to the world in general, not to the Church, the Pastor de-During Messiah's Reign, all nations shall be gathered before the Judgment Throne; and Messiah shall separate them, as a shepherd divides steep from goats. For a thousand years the world's judgment will progress and will demonstrate who desire to come into harmory with God and who prefer to be wa ward, goat-This separation is individual. In the parable the sheep class are pictured as gradually gathered to the right hand of the great Judge—the place of favor-and the goat class to the place of disfavor. Not until the conclusion of their trial will these classes find out just where they stand — Verses 37 and 38.

Throughout the Millennium The Messiah will deal with all mankind, the majority of whom are now in the great prison-house of death. Speaking of the resurrection, St. Paul says that they will come forth "every man in his own order." (1 Corinthians The Church will come forth first, then the Great Companytwo classes on the spirit plane. Next will come forth the Ancient Worthies. to be earthly representatives of the spiritual, invisible Heavenly Kingdom. On the contrary He said, "A little while and the world seeth Me no more."—Luke 19:28; John 14:19; 1 John S:1.

"Every Man in His Own Order.

Pastor Russell then explained the manner of the resurrection of mankind, and gave Scriptures to corroborate his conclusions. During the Millennium our Lord will have power to raise the dead. When the sandwiches are ready to serve, remove the plates of salad from the ice box and over the center of each pour some mayonnaise dressing. Coffee or iced ten is the drink to be served. The solad is so satisfying that few will feel the need of a sweeter course to follow. If one has no mayonnaise, the salad will be just as delicious if the celery and radishes are marinated in French dressing while the eggs and sandwiches are being Cauliflower Pickle.

Take a firm white cauliflower and soak it head down in a strong solution of salt and water for one hour; then take off the leaves and break up into small flowerettes. Pour boiling water over these, let them stand for eight minutes, drain and sprinkle liberally with salt.

Spread the flowerettes out on a sieve to dry. When thoroughly dry fill into pickle jars and pour over them hot vinegar that has been boiled with two ounces of peppercorns, one ounce of ginger root, half an ounce of mace and a saltspoonful of cayenne pepper. Allow the pickle to stand for twenty-four hours in the hot vinegar, then drain it off, reheat to the boiling point and pour again over the cauliflower. Cover the jars closely, filling them to overflowing, and seal while hot. Put away for ten days before using.

Ships Take Oil "on the Run."

The method of supplying vessels, especially battleships, with fuel oil at sea is remarkably simple when compared with that required for coaling. tanker is run up to within about 600 feet of the vessel needing oil, a tow line is attached, and a second line supports a hose through which the oil is pumped. Meanwhile the ships are steaming at an hourly speed of ten to twelve knots. An automatic tension furnishes the necessary elastic medium for paying out and taking up the supporting cable as required by motion of the vessel. By this method it is possible to transport from the tanker to the vessel taking on the fuel nearly 700 barrels an hour .- Wall Street Journal.

Drug Store Lights.

The colored lights that are characteristic of drug stores possess a charm for many reasons. Robert Louis Stevenson records that his friend Walter Ferrier "had a romantic affection for all pharmacies, and the bottles in the window were for him a poem. He said once that he knew no pleasure like driving through a lamplit city, waiting for the chemists' to go by.' The present sultan of Morocco owns somewhat similar tastes. When Muley Yusuf paid his first visit to Casablanca he departed with an assortment of green, blue and red jars purchased from the chemists. These caught his eye as he passed through the streets and were bought to adorn his residence.

Willing to Oblige.

A lady warned her new gardener; that her husband had an irritating habit of disparaging everything in the greenhouse and of ordering in a reckless manner new plants to be bought, but on no account was the gardener to humor him. "Whatever he says throw cold water on him, or he will ruin us with his extravagance."

At this point the new gardener turned on her a white and startled face. "Ma'am," he said, "if he orders me to pitch every plant in the place on the rubbish heap I shan't ever have the pluck to douse him with cold water. Won't it do as well if I get a drain of warm water out of the boiler and let it trickle gently down his neck?"

Laughter Saved the Ship.

Humor has been credited with the saving of many things, but perhaps never before has a ship been saved by its judicious application. In a great storm many years ago a ship's crew were all at prayers when a boy burst into a fit of violent laughter. Being reproved for his ill timed mirth and asked the reason for it, he said, "Why. I was laughing to think what a hissing the boatswain's red nose will make when it comes in contact with the water." . This ludicrous remark set the crew laughing, inspired them with new spirits, and by a great exertion they brought the vessel safely into port .-

ANNOUNCEMENT

The following prices f.o.b. Ford, Ontario., effective Aug. 2, '15

Ford Runabout $480.00 Ford Touring Car . . $530.00 Ford Town Car. . .

No speedometer included in this year's equipment, otherwise cars fully equipped.

There can be no assurance given against an advance in these prices at any time. We guarantee, however, that there will be no reduction in these prices prior to Aug. 1, 1916,

Profit Sharing with Retail Buyers

On August 1, 1914 we made the announcement that if we could make and sell at retail 30,000 Ford cars between August 1, 1914 and August 1, 1915 we would share profits with the retail purchasers. We have sold only 18,774 Ford cars in the time specified and, therefore, are unable to share our profits with those who purchased Ford cars between the above dates.

Our plan to profit-share with retail purchasers of Ford cars during 1914-1915 was not successful due to conditions which we could not possibly foresee at the time we made our appropriate last August. The war and the consequent unsettled conditions of business seriously affected our sales and increased our manufacturing costs so that during the last year we did not earn a profit not required for the normal expansion of our business in a manufacturing and service way.

However we still have confidence in our profit-sharing plan, but a realization of the uncertainty of conditions generally makes it advisable to defer any announcement of future profit-sharing until a later date.

We are, however, positive we cannot reduce costs for several months, and therefore can offer no profit-sharing for cars delivered during August, September and October, 1915.
